More Information:

MORE THAN ONE HUNDRED YEARS OF HISTORY ILLUSTRATE REAL CLUB DE LA PUERTA DE HIERRO RANK AND STANDING, CONSOLIDATED AS ONE OF THE BEST COURSES ON THE INTERNATIONAL GOLFING SCENE.

THE CLUB'S ORIGINS

The Real Club de la Puerta de Hierro was founded in 1895 under the name of Madrid Polo Club and its original location was in the heart of Madrid, adjacent to the old Castellana horse racetrack.

Golf was originally played at the club in 1901 and in 1908, the club changed its name to Madrid Polo-Golf Club after J.H. Taylor laid out Spain's first 18-hole golf course on the Cuarenta Fanegas area of Madrid.

In 1909, HRH King Alfonso XIII leased the property where the club is currently located to encourage the creation of a country club with polo, golf and tennis activities. The club was renamed as the Real Club de la Puerta de Hierro due to its close proximity to an iron gate which granted access to the royal grounds of El Pardo. The new facilities opened in april 1914, with the inauguration of the 18-hole golf course laid out by English architect H.S. Colt.

Since its opening, the original golf course has undergone many improvements and enlargements by Tom Simpson (1924 & 1946), John Harris (1966), Robert Trent Jones Sr. (1998) and Kyle Phillips (2000).

R.C. Puerta de Hierro

12th - 14th June 2014

The Real Club de la Puerta de Hierro has a long standing tradition in the organization of golf tournaments. The promotion of competitive golf lies at the heart of the club and over 100 years, its amateur and professional golfers have garnered an impressive list of national and international victories.

The Campeonato de Puerta de Hierro (1907), which recently held its 100th anniversary is Spain's oldest golf tournament. The club also sponsored the birth of the International Amateur Championship (1907) and the Copa Nacional Puerta de Hierro (1915), two of the main amateur competitions in the Spanish calendar. International matches have been held going back to 1924 (Spain-France) and as recently as 2005 (Spain-England), as well as other major amateur tournaments such as the Eisenhower Trophy (1970), the Vagliano Trophy (1981), the European Team Championships (1991) and the Michel Bonallack Trophy (2000).

The club has also sponsored professional golf, giving birth to the Spanish Open in 1912 and organizing an additional 27 editions of Spain's major tournament. More recently, Puerta de Hierro has been a regular venue of the Madrid Open, part of the European tour, which was held in the club every year from 1968 until 1993.

Score Card

The "low course", campo de abajo, used for the championship, is the most competitive 18 hole golf course of the Real Club de la Puerta de Hierro and has a lot of history behind it. Designed and built in 1914 by the great Harry Colt, several holes still maintain the original routing (first, third, fourth holes). Tom Simpson also left his mark in a great number of holes in the back nine of the low course. But the main work of the actual layout belongs to Trent Jones Jr and his assistance Kyle Phillips who redesigned in 1998 the entire course to what it is today: a tight and competitive track very well integrated in a centenary holm oak forest with lots of interesting shots from the tee and greens with a lot of movement. The "Sierra de Guadarrama" mountains in the background complete a marvelous setup for the golfers to enjoy.
